

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In an electric motor-driven power steering apparatus which comprises a bridge circuit for connecting a power source between input terminals and also connecting an electric motor between output terminals and energizes the electric motor by this bridge circuit and operates electric motor power to a steering system, the bridge circuit includes a predetermined number of arms constructed by connecting circuits for connecting switching elements in parallel with diodes in series so that the diodes mutually become reverse polarity.